Both Mr. Peres and Gen. Gur refused to say whether Israel would make a reprisal raid across its frontiers to avenge the victims, as Israeli forces have cus-

The guerrillas began with an ambush of a bus carrying Arab women, killing two and wounding They then invaded a home and killed the family of four before taking over schoolhouse where vacationing pupils from a religious high school were sleeping. About 22, including a couple of teachers, escaped during the day, but some 85 were still in the school at the time of the Israeli attack.

Mr. Peres said the order was given for the troops to storm the shuttered building when it be-came clear that the guerrillas were not going to extend their deadline.

Fifty soldiers firing automatic weapons and rocket-propelled grenades charged the building at 5:30 p.m., prompting the guerrillas to open fire on the hostages and the attackers.

House Unit Votes to Subpoena 11 More Tapes, Nixon Diaries

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, May 15 (IRT). -The House Judiciary Committee, rejecting White House claims that all relevant Watergate evidence had already been released, voted overwhelmingly today to subpoens additional presidential tapes and documents for its impeachment inquiry.

The panel voted, 37 to 1, to subpoena the tapes of 11 conversations—two on April 4, 1972, six on June 20, 1972, and three on June 23, 1972. The Watergate break-in occurred on June 17, 1972.

The lone dissenter was the ranking minority member, Rep. Edward Hutchinson, R-Mich. who has consistently opposed all presidential subpoenss on grounds that they are unenforceable.

The committee then approved a second subpoens. In a series of four votes, the panel demanded Mr. Nixon's diaries for nine months in 1972 and 1973 The votes all were won by substantial majorities, though not as great as that for the vote on the tapes. Meanwhile, in a related development, President Nixon waived executive privilege and permit-ted Alexander Halg jr., his chief of staff, to testify before the Senate Watergate committee today, Sen. Sam Ervin ir., the panel's chairman, said.

"He's answered every question we've put to him so far," Sen. Ervin said after Gen. Haig had been before the committee for 1 1/2 hours.

The waiver of executive privilege extended only to questions about the use of a $100,000 payment made by representatives of billionaire Howard Hughes four years ago to Charles (Bebe) Rebozo, the President's close personal friend, Sen. Ervin said. "We learned there was considerable discussion in the White House about the Hughes money from May of 1973 on," Sen. Ervin said of Gen. Haig's testimony. Mr. Rebozo returned the money in the spring of 1973. He said he did not use it for any purpose. Herbert Kalmbach, Mr. Nixon's former personal lawyer, is said to have told the committee that Mr. Rebozo loaned the money to Mr. Nixon's two brothers, the President's personal secretary, Rose

Kissinger Effort Threatened By Palestinian Terror Attack

JERUSALEM, May 15 (UPI).— The Arab guerrillas' seizure of Israeli children and the ensuing gunbattle that left 24 dead further threatened the success of U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's peace efforts today and delayed them by a day.

In a strong appeal, believed directed partly at Syria, Mr. Kissinger called on all responsible governments to condemn such acts and deal with the guerrillas "severely."

With the Israeli cabinet fully occupied all day with the agonizing question of how to cope with the situation, Mr. Kissinger was unable to meet as scheduled with Premier Golda Meir about his deadlocked efforts to es-tablish a cease-fire line on the Golan Heights and bring about a military disengagement between Israel and Syria.

Instead, he will meet with her tomorrow morning before his fifth shuttle to Damascus to confer with Syrian President Hafez al-Assad, a day late.

By Tomorrow

By tomorrow night, when Mr. Kissinger is to return to Jerusalem, he is expected to know whether he can succeed in getting agreement on a ceasefire line on this trip.

With time running out and the talks still deadlocked, the prospects appear dimmer. Mr. Kissinger did not appear to have given up all hope. Waiting to resume his diplomatic efforts, he told reporters that Israel and Syria are "moving toward each other and not away."

But at a minimum, Mr. Kissinger's mission has been delayed by the tragedy at Maalot, scene of a shootout by Israeli soldiers and Arab guerrillas who had selzed children as hostages.

At a maximum, the terrorists' action could poison the political atmosphere in Israel and, if the Israelis retaliate as they have before, make a settlement more difficult.

A high American official has emphasized in the last few days that the gap between Israel and Syria has greatly narrowed. It is small in distance, the official said, but the two countries still may not be able to bring themselves to make the final concessions necessary to bridge it during this Kissinger trip,

If not, the official said, Mr. Kissinger planned to return to the area in several weeks, when they have bad time to reconsider. Once the basic question of where a cease-fire line should be drawn on the Golan Heights is includes self-determination for decided, the official said, the the Palestinians."

other issues of a buffer zone, a thinning-out of forces and the role of the United Nations in policing the agreement will tend to fall into place. Information Minister Shimon Peres said the government had appreciated Mr. Kissinger's statement of condemnation and that he was kept more or less informof what was happening at Maalot. But he said no cabinet minister was able to think of anything today but how to free the trapped children, and he refused all questions about the effect of the in-cident on the Kissinger mission. There was little doubt in the minds of American officials that the timing of the attack was aimed at wrecking Mr. Kissinger's efforts. Mr. Kissinger must be

About Consequences CAIRO, May 15 (NYT).— Egyptian officials tonight said they hoped the "tragedy in Maalot" would not sidetrack or delay the search for a durable peace in the Middle East. There was anxiety among diplomats from moderate Arab countries that the death of a number of Israeli children at the hands of Palestinian guerrillas could lead to a breakdown of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's mediation effort. If Mr. Kissinger's mission were to break down now, at the moment when emotional tension on all sides is at its highest, the area might well slip back into all-out war, one diplomatic observer said. Mr. Kissinger had been scheduled to come to Caro tomorrow, according to U.S. Embassy officials, but his visit has been put off for the time being in the aftermath of the guerrilla at-A high official, speaking privately, said that Egypt condemned all acts of violence against innocent people.

"But," he added, "this tragic event occurred on the 26th anniversary of the partition of Palestine. The rights of the Palestinians have been systematically ignored all these years, and desperation is the result?

He said the tragedy should prompt all parties involved to focus their attention on the underlying causes and to go ahead "even more urgently with the search for a durable peace that

LONDON, May 15 (UPI).-About 500 shipbuilding workers rebelled today against a campaign the National Engineering Union and leftist politicians to hait the delivery of four war-ships to Chile.

In a mass meeting, the engineering workers voted to reject the union's demand to cease work on two Chilean submarines they are bullding in Scotland.

The union had ordered a halt to work on the submarines and two frigates earlier this week because they could "be used against the Chilean people" by the military junta in Santiago.

The union's move came after leftist cabinet ministers failed in an attempt to get Foreign Minister James Callaghan to cancel the £60-million ($144million) contract.

Gligorov Will Head Yugoslav Parliament

BELGRADE, May 16 (UPI).— A newly constituted Yugoslav parliament today held its opening session and elected Kiro Gligorov, an economics expert, as its president.

The parliament has a wider representational basis than before. The recently proclaimed constitution was structured to give more political and economic power to ordinary workers.

Most of the delegates are newcomers. with more than 100 laborers making up about onethird of the number of delegates. All, however, are veteran Communist party officials.

mler Poul Hartling's minority Liberal government and a number of non-Socialist parties was public acceptance of Mogens Glistrup's anti-tax anti-bureaucracy Progress party as "a responsible political party."

Mr. Glistrup, ostracized and ridiculed since he was elected to the Folketing (parliament) on a wave of taxpayer discontent last December, put his party's 27 votes behind the government in return for firm pledges that income taxes and public expenditures would be cut next year and his splinter party be accepted as an equal, respectable partner.

Later today, the Folketing, weary after a week of negotiations and long sessions, voted to approve the proposed sales tax

Threats of Strikes

The end of the crisis came at a time when few political observers thought elections could be syclided.

But as the Folketing relaxed, after days of pressure, threats of extensive strikes to protest the sales taxes came from across the country.

Guerrilla Warning The guerrillas shouted from a shuttered window: "We shall bold out. Don't try to drag this out. Get in touch with the ambassador and spare the lives of your children ... "If you fail to stand by the timetable, we will blow this place up with everything and everybody still inside."

Besides the children who escaped during the day, the guer-rillas sent two more to carry the list of prisoners they wanted released. The list was handed to Mr Davan who was flown imsult with the cabinet.

The guerrillas, members of the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, demanded that the freed prisoners be flown to Damascus or Nicosia, Cyprus.

Military sources said two of the prisoners had been taken to the school to tell the guerrillas that the others were being gathered. But there was no indication that the three would accept an extension of the deadline.

A front statement from Damascus said the guerrillas demanded the release of 26 prisoners. Of these 16 were on a list presented by the guerrillas to the Israelis. Five were to be selected by two of the prisoners named on this list and the Israelis themselves were to select five.

The spokesman said the guerrillas' list of 16 included three members of the "Red Front" convicted of spying for the Arabs last year. One of the three was Daoud Turki, leader of the ring. Another name on the guerrillas' list was that of Mohammed Hassan Ghrifat, a former Israeli Army sergeant failed on charges of collaborating with the Palestinian guerrillas.

From Damascus, the Marxist front said "a disaster took place and it is Israel's responsibility to bear the consequences."

A later front statement said: "It has been proved that the Israeli command was preparing a treacherous trick at the same on for the exchange of pri-

"By this treacherous attack, the Israeli command supplied proof that it does not care for the lives of its citizens despite all its claims, and that it only cares for its political interests," the statement said.

The front organization charged that Israel "notified the Romanian and French ambassadors that it approved our demands for the release of the prisoners, even while making preparations to storm the school building." The front, without explaining the source of its information, also denied that its guerrilles had begun the shooting in the school.

The Israelis, however, said that the French and Romanian ambassadors had been unable to approach the school to negotiate secause the necessary passwords had falled to arrive from Paris and Bucharest. Israeli planes struck at Arab guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon today, attacking targets where, Israel claims, guerrillas. operating across the border are concentrated. It was the third straight day of raids there.

Israeli planes also bombed and strafed Syrian targets on the Golan Heights front today, the Israeli high command said. They hit Syrian positions on Mount Hermon in the afternoon.

Raid Deepens Syrians' Pessimisn

By Juan de Onis DAMASCUS, May 15 (NYT):-

The Palestinian guerrilla attack on an Israeli school deepened the pessimism today among Syrian officials involved in negotiations with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to reach a militarydisengagement agreement with Israel. Throughout the Arab Middle East there was a sense of crisis concerning Mr. Kissinger's mission. Syria renewed its call for an urgent conference of Arab chiefs of state to review the situation.

In Lebanon, where armed Palestinian groups in the Mount Hermon foothills have drawn Israeli air strikes during the last week, there were fears of a major Israeli reprisal attack, despite official denials that the guerrillas had been based in Lebanon.

Part of Offensive

A guerrilia organization, which assumed official responsibility for the attack, presented this raid and several other sabotage inci-dents as part of an offensive under way by guerrilla groups operating within Israel.

Syrian officials, who had been expecting Mr. Kissinger to return from Israel this afternoon and spend the evening here as the guest of President Hafez al-Assad, were noticeably disappointed this afternoon when U.S. officials here received a Kissinger message saying "not today."

Syrian officials said that "overall peace in the region is more important than any incident," and they expressed the hope that Mr. Kissinger would continue his efforts. He is expected to stop here tomorrow morning before going on to Cairo.

But uncertainty over what reprisal Israel may take for the killing of the young Israelis at the school in Maslot cast a heavy cloud over the continuation of a visible popular endorsement of Mr. Sadat's decision to seek a negotiated settlement with rael and to begin relying on U.S. political and economic support without waiting for an agreement on troop disengagement between Israel and Syria.

The document involved in the vote is called the "October Paper." The title denotes Sadat's contention that the Egyptian Army's crossing of the Suez Canal in October opened up new era and gave Egypt the self-confidence to open its doors to the outside world, notably to foreign investment, and to devote itself to the task of rescuing its ailing economy.

The Egyptians had hoped that disengagement on the Syrian front would be achieved last February, immediately after Egypt's agreement to a separation of forces on the Suez Canal front. The delay involving Syria has

Soldiers Kill Two in Ulster As General Strike Begins

Troops today shot to death two men caught in the act of making bombs, the British Army said. The deaths occurred as a general strike mounted by militant Protestants crippled Northern Ireland's industry, with sporadic street violence and power blackouts reported in some areas.

The shooting incident occurred at an abandoned farmhouse near Newry, close to the Irish Republic border. It started when a British patrol discovered two beer kegs of explosives and bomb-making equipment at the farmhouse this morning, an army spokesman said.

The patrol staked out the area and this afternoon saw the two men arrive and "start work turning the explosives into bombs."

"Our soldiers challenged the men three times to put up their hands and surrender. Instead, the men dived as if to pick up weapons; we opened fire." As a result of the strike, all work stopped on the Belfast docks and many factories halted their operations. Some plant owners said they shut down because they feared for the safety of their

British Press Investigations Jolt Public View of Officials

LONDON, May 15 (WP) -Brian Walden is one of the ablest and most respected parliementarians in the British Labor party. A gifted analyst he appears frequently on television, discussing British and American politics with equal skill.

The Guardian recently revealed that Mr. Walden has been recelving £5,000 (about $12,000) a year from the National Bookmakers Association. Mr. Walden signed the contract as a consultant two years ago when he was in the middle of a successful fight to protect the bookmakers' worth more than £800 million a year—from the threat ened competition of a state betting agency.

There is nothing illegal in Mr. Walden's arrangement. He observed to the letter the House of Commons rule and openly deciared his new financial interest at the time he signed with the bookles. He took up their cause originally from conviction, and no one has suggested that the money increased the intensity of Mr. Walden's fight on the bookies' behalf. Nevertheless, the Guardian's report concluded, there "does seem to have been an error in judgment."

What has changed here, and sharply, is the climate of opinion. Deals recently regarded as entirely proper are now being examined as conflicts of interest.

Sudden Discovery

The British media's sudden discovery of this phenomenon is striking some of the biggest names in both major parties and has touched off a remarkable rash of investigative journalism. Early last year, commercial television prepared a cautious documentary on John Poulson, an architect who won millions in government contracts by bribing officials.

The program was never shown. Poulson was ultimately jailed and sentenced to seven years on some of the corruption charges.

But about a week ago, commercial talevision presented a 30-minute feature on a Poulson contract. It explored pitilessly the efforts of Reginald Maudling to win for Poulson a Malta hospital job worth almost $1.5 million, Mr. Mandling, a former Conservative chancellor of the Exchequer, home secretary and deputy leader of the Tory party, is still a member of the subcommittee as well as the Watergate committee, wrote members of the subcommittee for his decision to issue 2 sub-poens that would compel Internal Revenue Countissioner Donald Alexander to produce the docu-ments the subcommittee wants Lists Submitted

Burke Willsey, an assistant to Mr. Alexander, disclosed, when informed of Sen Ervin's action, that Mr. Alexander had only yes-terday decided to give the sub-committee one of the items it wants a list of the names of the 8,000 politically active individuals and 3,000 activist organizations on which Internal Revenue collected information.

Mr. Willsey added that "as far 25 We are concerned, the only controversy here is over purely tax-administration records, which the agency claims it cannot disclose to a committee of Congress, plus the problem presented by classified information in IRS files that was supplied by other agencies, such as the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

Sen. Ervin is seeking to discover every detail of the activity of an IRS special section, established in August, 1969, which was originally called the Activist Organizations Committee and later the Special Services Staff.

The existence of the special group first came to light in 1972. Since then officials of the IRS have consistently contended that it had the legitimate purpose of tracking down persons and or-ganizations that could be presumed to have a higher-than-average probability of evading taxes. Some, but by no means all, of the groups and individuals advocated refusal to pay taxes as a form of political protest.

Among the documents already submitted there appears to have been no final report on the numper or amount of tax delinquencies that were uncovered by the Special Services Staff in its fouryear life. Mr. Alexander "dismantled the group" last August.

By Ivan Goldman BOULDER, Colo., May 13 (WP). -A scientist here believes that the cancer-causing ingredient m cigarette smoking may be radiation-not tars or nicotine.

Tiny, radioactive particles become imbedded in a smoker's lungs and build up over the years, until he is getting doses of radiation that compare with those of uranium miners, said Dr. Edward Martell, a chemist with the National Center for Atmospheric Research here. He will publish his findings in a forthcoming issue of Nature, the British scientific journal.

His theory is supported by a co-researcher, Dr. Edward Radford, a physician and professor of environmental medicine at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

Dr. Martell estimated that it will take two or three years of research to pin down his theory. He already has devoted 15 months radioactive parlicles naturally a cigarette, radioactive lead is present in the atmosphere can collect on the sticky hairs of tobacco leaves. The hairs are so small that they can be seen only under a microscope. Dr. Martell said it took two student assistants several months to gather live sets of 2,000 hairs for research. recoiled from this concept." Institute Skeptical

The official position of the National Cancer Institute is that "the radiation theory is not supported by any evidence, so far."
The institute is not researching radiation buildup, although it is spending $16.4 million a year on lung cancer research,

Dr. Martell noted that the Atomic Energy Commission considered the amount of radiation found in cigarette smoke to be well below "safe" levels. It did not consider, he said, the possible cumulative effects in the lungs. In a smoker's lungs, Dr. Martell believes, thousands of particles of lead and polonium gather over the years in tiny clusters, and a long-time smoker is still being bombarded with radiation caused by cigarettes smoked years before.

Studies Backdate Existence Of Humans in North America

SAN DIEGO, May 15 (AP).-A group of scientists said rester-day that fossil studies show man may have existed in the New World 50,000 years ago, almost 30,000 years earlier than previously believed.

The researchers said that a study of human fossils found between 1920 and 1935 along the southern California coast shows "a new chapter in the story of man, indicating that man existed in the New World at least 50,000 years ago.

Their conclusion disputes the common theory that man first appeared on the North American continent about 30,000 years ago by migrating across the Bering Sea over a land bridge of the Ice

Dr. Jeffrey Bada, of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography, developed a dating technique used to examine the bones first believed to be only 7,500 years old.

Dr. George Carter, a geography professor at Texas A & M who has studied archaeological sites in the San Diego area for years, asked Dr. Bada to date the bones. which have been stored for four or five decades in San Diego. The fossils include a skull, jawbone, ribs and other human bones found by the late Malcolm Rogers, a Scripps archaeologist. The skeletel remains were discovered near what now is Solana Beach, Del Mar and La Jolla in San Diego County, Laguna Beach in Orange County and the Baldwin Hills area of Los Angeles.

A skull found near Del Mar was dated back 48,000 years and another, found near La Jolla, at 44,000, Dr. Bada said. This compared to a dating of 26,000 years for the so-called Los Angeles man, previously believed to be the oldest fossil found in North America. In an interview, Dr. Bada said

The police said Mrs. Sebanne bought the baby for 5,000 francs ($1,045) from his real mother, Francine Tousch, because she feared her husband would abandon her if she did not have a baby. She then arranged to have the infant spirited away from the maternity home, the police said. They said the husband believed

The Egyptians, first regarded as revolutionary brothers and then dismissed as troublemakers, are again welcome in the Sudan. Only the Soviet Union, blamed for encouraging the 1971 Com-munist coup attempt, and Libya. which he accuses of trying to topple him, are not now considered friends.

The 45-year-old President, who seized power on May 25, 1969, promising leftist policies, is optimistic that his new direction will rescue the country from "The picture for potential development in the Sudan is good," Gen. Numeiri said in a recent interview. "We have now started with Saudi Arabia and we have a pretty good foundation. It's a good start."

Gen. Numetri was referring to $200-million loan from 31 international banks guaranteed earlier this year by Saudi Arabia. Investment projects include a 200,000-barrel-a-day oil refinery to be built at Port Sudan on the Red Sea to process Saudi crude for export. This is being organized by Saudi entrepreneur Adnan Khashoggi.

Another major project 13 a $300million food-producing operation that will include cattle raising, meat packing, feed growing and related activities. Gen. Numeiri predicts that his country will reach self-sufficiency in wheat this year and a large export program in sugar is beginning.

There is also growing inferest in tourism. Hilton has signed an agreement to build a 300-room hotel here.

Kuwait and the Sudan's northern neighbor, Egypt, are among those contributing to the projects. which Mr. Khashoggi is convinced will finally put the Sudanese

Paris Robbers Use 2 Hostages To Make Escape

PARIS, May 15 (AP). - Bank robbers bargained with the lives of seven hostages for a getaway car, then made good their escape and released the prisoners, police reported today.

The robbers, reported as being two or three, held two adults and five children prisoner in a house. then took a mother and child along on a frantic escape, chased by police.

They gave pursuers the slip and released the mother and her 11-year-old son near a police station in the suburbs of Paris. An alarm had gone off during the robbery, and the bandits ran out of the bank, chased by a sound of police. The men holed up in a house and demanded a gelaway car. The mother came to the door of the building and pleaded with police to "do something for my children in danger."

the bandits had alloved her to speak to the policemen. Authorities decided to provide getaway car, and the bandits took along the woman and her son for protection.

"Before the Middle East war last October, the Sudan was the only stable area in the region," he added. "Numeiri is a great hero. He united the north and the south and has created ele-ments of stability."

Mr. Khashoggi was referring to Gen. Numeiri's success in ending the 17-year-long civil war be-tween the black Africans in the south and the Moslem Arabs of the north. Since the settlement of the conflict in March, 1972, Gen. Numeiri has traveled to all 10 of the nation's provinces.

Oil Payments Danger

The recent move by the Italian government to curb nonessential imports is a warning signal that the world energy crisis is far from over and may be entering a new and more dangerous phase. The payments imbalances set off by last year's fourfold increase in Mideast oil prices are beginning to register.

All the industrial countries have agreed repeatedly to accept their share of the $65-billion "oil deficit" expected this year. recognizing that attempts by individual countries to reduce their own deficitswhether by trade, monetary or domestic economic policies other than energy conservation—would merely off-load it onto others. But good resolutions are one thing; what is less plentiful is the political stability, steady nerves, financial credit and sense of community essential for a government to juggle unprecedented deficits.

So far, the two governments that have broken their pledged word have been those most dependent on Mideast cil and, thus, most vulnerable. France tried to get ahead of an approaching deficit in January by devaluing the franc, to brake imports and spur exports. Fortunately, that did not trigger a wave of competitive devaluations. thanks to the more responsible behavior, and better prospects, of other industrial nations. Italy, facing an $8-billion payments deficit, has imposed a special "tax" on about half of its imports through an import deposit system. Enormous pressures to follow suit are mounting elsewhere, as in Britain, which is now running a current account payments deficit of $10 billion a year.

The fundamental problem faced by the community of advanced nations is that the payments burden of the oil-price increase is falling very unevenly.

The United States and West Germany are selling more at higher prices to finance imports. Others, such as Britain and Italy, have been unable to expand their exports.

Moreover, the new Arab oil earnings that are being invested abroad naturally are going more to the strong than to the weak countries. The petrodollars deposited shortterm in Swiss and British banks are not proving to be equally available to all industrial countries. That helped precipitate Italy's new import curbs.

In any event, the unprecedented payments problem ahead cannot begin to be solved by short-term loans, including the small, highinterest-rate loan facility the International Monetary Fund has proposed, useful as that would be. An international system of deferred debt repayment for huge sums of money is required and it can only be negotiated between the principal oil-importing and oilexporting nations.

By 1980, the oil-importing countries will have to borrow hundreds of billions of dollars from the oil producers-directly or through banking intermediarles—to pay for the oil they buy. The 12-nation Energy Coordinating Group set up by the February Washington conference is studying solutions to this and other critical energy problems. But the head of steam behind this Americanled enterprise in February has evaporated into the spring sunshine as the oil shortage has eased.

Concrete proposals for stopgap monetary measures by the industrial countries and long-term arrangements to be negotiated with the oil producers are needed now. Italy's import curbs are a dire warning that time is running out.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Vice-President Ford asserted the other day that "corruption, malfeasance and wrongdoing" in Washington were "hammer blows to the confidence the American people have placed in their government." Later the same day, Mr. Ford tempered his strong language by saying, "... the President, I hope, will survive, because I think he's innocent."

A day later, after meeting with Mr. Nixon, the Vice-President denied that he and the President had discussed Republican defections; but the next day he said that he had told the President that he was not among those "trying to jump off the ship of state." When asked if he still supported the President as fully as he had when he was named Vice-President in the fall, Mr. Ford replied. "I think the answer is yes."

Everyone is entitled to an occasional change of mind, but Mr. Ford's variety of tones and multiple changes of course during his six months as Vice-President are of particular interest because he is the most imminently presidential Vice-President in American history. Some samplings from his record are instructive.

Mr. Ford reportedly expressed concern that the Watergate crisis might have weakened President Nixon's negotiating posture with the Soviet Union. After that report was published, the Vice-President shifted the burden of his concern about bargaining power to the Senate because of its rejection of a request for additional funds for Viet-

Early misgivings about the Vice-President's record of dogged partisanship were hardly allayed by his thumping assault on Nixon critics at the Farm Bureau convention in January. Soon thereafter Mr. Ford swung to public admonitions to the White House to be more forthcoming with its evidence.

Eyebrows were raised at the White House and around the country when the Vice-President's ruminations about the shape of a Ford cabinet were published in The New Republic. Later, of course, yet another in the endless stream of clarifications issued from his office.

The New York Times recognizes that Mr. Ford's situation is sensitive and his roles are complex. He is a potential president. He is also his party's chief cheerleader at its most cheerless time. He must serve as a conduit and as a prodder of the grass roots as well as of Capitol Hill for a beleaguered President to whom he is beholden.

Nevertheless, the pressures of the Ford vice-presidency are not nearly so heavy or so complex as those he would encounter in the presidency; and it is Mr. Ford's ability to sustain those burdens that concerns the country. The nation needs less a rudderless tongue than it does a sense of measured judgment in the White House. Mr. Ford himself described the times well in saying that these are "singular days in our national history-days when emotions run deep and strong, days when doubt and suspicion are widespread. . ."

Healing can only begin when the people gain a sense that their potential president can wrest durable priorities from tempestuous events and chart a consistent course based upon principled reflection.

A Defeat for the Clergy

The result of the divorce referendum in Italy reveals the dwindling influence of the Roman Catholic Church in that country. Some of the clergy intervened in the debate in a manner that was anything but helpful to the church's cause. But aside from that, even those who voted against the retention of divorce mostly did so mainly from conservative conviction and a desire to halt the process of institutional disintegration on modern society. . . .

- From the Neue Zürcher Zeitung (Zurich).

It is difficult to avoid the suspicion that the referendum may prove a watershed in postwar Italian politics. In the first place, it marks a serious rebuff to the Catholic church. Secondly, it could mark a turningpoint in the place of the Communists in Italian politics. But a campaign which was won (despite the deliberately misleading phrasing of the question) on a platform of

NEW YORK-A rumor that ex-President Grover Cleveland had died unexpectedly while fishing in the Ohio River spread over the country like wildfire last night, causing no end of commotion and sorrow. The rumor finally turned out to be just that, started in Chicago. When a reporter found the ex-President fishing in Lake Michigan and asked him about the story, Mr. Cleveland replied, "You can see for yourself that it's abouted."

to impeach.

WASHINGTON-Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana is a reminder that there are still a lot of steady decent folk around here watching the store, Everybody in Washington is not crazy; it just seems that way.

Room S-208 in the Capitol Building, Mike's hideaway, is as plain and calm as a country lawyer's office. The door is always open. Inside, no fancy ele-gant people or heroic portraits of the majority leader. Some old amiable cartoons, and a big picture of Jack Kennedy throwing out the first pitch on opening day, with Mike in the background, as usual. An atmosphere of cheerful and relaxed efficiency, coffee perking on the shelf and cookies on the table Mike is sad but not pessimistic about the present mess in Washington. He thinks it is wrong to press the President to resign, but he understands why the Repub-lican leader in the Senate, Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, condemned the President's private Watergate conversations, and why the Republican leader in the House, John Rhodes, suggests that resignation has to be considered. That's Mike's way: He tries to understand everybody's problems.

Pressuring

But pressuring the President to resign, he insists, would be unfair, evade rather than resolve the moral and legal issues. Give the President not only the presumption of innocence, he says, but every opportunity to have his lawyers in the House and Senate to argue his case, cross-examine witnesses, and appear on the floor of the House and Senate, if he chooses, to defend himself personally.

Let the system work, says Mike It is not only the President, but the Congress and the Constitution that are on trial But-and here he is very tough-let it work all the way—not halfway. Take the President at his word. Give him every conceivable opportunity to state his case, all the lawyers he wants to challenge the evi-dence and all the time he needs to do so. But, he insists, "Let's have the evidence."

Mansfield has a sense of pity about human folly and is very generous about the personal aspects of this tragedy—and he sees not in partisan terms. He is beyond all personal ambition now, even beyond his own party's battles. For example, he not only sees Watergate and Vietnam in moral terms, but also Chappaquiddick and Sen. Kennedy, and admires Kennedy as a good senator but is against him as the presidential nominee of his party

So there must be something right about a system that puts a decent man like Mansfield in a position of party leadership, and something consoling in the thought that people in the House and the Senate, worried about what to do in this crisis, come to room S-208 to talk out their anxieties; and seek Mike's quiet counsel.

Mansfield, if I hear him right, is looking beyond the present turmoil in Washington. He is airsid that the nation would be deeply divided for a long time if President Nixon were forced to resign by political or newspaper

He thinks the whole Watergate scandal could have been avoided if the President had been open and trusted the system, and had wondered about what was thinks we've had enough secrecy, right or wrong and had said "yes" or "no" at the right time. But he is not worrying about the past now. He agrees with the President that resignation is a and enough deception. Claire Sterling From Rome:

The most striking point this [divorce] referendum has made is that Catholic crusades of the 1948 kind will probably never be possible in Italy again.

ROME.—It isn't often that voters in any country have taught politicians as stunning & lesson as the Italians did in their referendum on divorce last Sunday. By the time they went to the polls, they had been exposed to some of the shabblest political confidence tricks anybody has tried to pull here since the postwar republic was founded. They have confounded everybody by refusing to be gulled.

The question before them was supposed to be whether they did or did not want to repeal Italy's three-year-old divorce law. But the question as actually put to them by the anti-divorce lobby was whether they did or did not want a Bolshevik government, free love, flaming adultery, rampant nymphomania, starving grass widows and weeping children, homosexual marriages, and wives running off with housemaids for a lesbian fling—this last cited in dramatic warning to a male Sicilian audiance by no less a personage than the Christian Democrais' general secretary, Amintore Fanfant. In the end, though, the voters concluded that what they were in fact supposed to be voting about was simply whether they did or did not want to repeal the divorce law. Since the law was demonstrably no menace to home and family here—only 66,641 couples have gotten divorced so far, three-quarters of them after being separated for more than 20 years-59 percent of the Italian voters decided to keep it.

Even Sicily

The majority was made up not just of sophisticated northerners and city dwellers but also of presumably benighted southerners and peasants. Party lines were crossed as never before in the republic's history. Nearly every stronghold of the Roman Catholic Church, not to speak of the ruling Christian Democratic party and its sole allies in this campaign-the neo-Fascists-went to pieces. Even Sicily, a backward-looking island if there ever was one, gave 51 percent of its vote to uphold divorce. Looking back it seems incredible that Catholic politicians and the church itself should have risked such a test. Reportedly the Vatican didn't care much for the idea. The decision to go ahead with the referendum is said to have been Fanfani's. By all accounts, he was depending on a colossal mobilization of the Catholic clergy to deliver an absolute majority for the Christian Democrats, as it did in 1948: the first and last one they ever

Given another majority like that, Fanfani might have created the enduring Catholic regime he has reportedly set his heart on, with himself at the head of But times have certainly

Fanfani's defeat, and it is shattering, has come first of all at 60 the hands of dissident fellow-Catholics in his own Christian Democratic party, Catholic Acand all levels of the Vatican hierarchy: The most striking point this referendum has made is that Catholic crusades of the 1948 kind will probably never be possible in Italy again. Apart from the deep cracks in Catholic ranks, the attitude of many million lay voters in this referendum shows how enormously Italy has changed in this last quarter of a century. For one reason or another—inertia, igno-rence, cynicism, distilusion, indif-ference—these once compliant and predictable voters used to be the establishment politician's delight. It is another and rarer kind of politician, the kind who has always wished Italian voters would show just the sort of gumption they have just shown, who is delighted now.

Obviously it was more than the relatively narrow issue of divorce what stirred these voters to make their decisration of independence. Everything that has been going wrong in Italy for so long has been going much wrong-er faster lately: The postal ser-vice which hasn't worked for nearly a year, the courts grinding to a halt, unbearable and unrelieved urban pressures, appalling housing conditions and shocking real estate speculation. egregious corruption in high (and low) places, and above all a steady, dizzying intolerable rise in prices: While Italy's politicians were running after "yes" or "no" yotes on divorce this menth, spending $100 million in the process, the country continued to inch inexorably towards economic

State of Shock

It is too soon to know whether the Italians have forced their establishment to a more serious consideration of all these prob-lems, by last Sunday's and Monday's declaration of independence or indeed, to know what if anything they may have accomplished, beyond saving an elementary democratic right long since accepted in the rest of the civilized world. They appear to have demonstrated that they are neither politically nor mentally retarded. They have evidently opted for this century over the last. where social customs are concerned. They seem to have sent their Christian Democratic rulers into a healthy state of shock. For the moment, they are immensely

A week later (May 9) he propped up a Jesuit theologian to pronounce the tapes as fine examples of Christian moral-ity, and to describe their principal author as the embodiment of Christian virtue and high statesmanship.

Here is what I would like someone please to explain to me. Why is Mr. Nixon's judgment so awry these days? I write within minutes of reading the remarks of the Rev. John McLaughlin, Jesuit priest and presidential side, and I-who ran for public office only once, and achieved 13 percent of the vote-know as certainly as that the sun will rise tomorrow that this venture will bring yet further discredit to President Nixon-and discredit to Father

—Letters – Haig's Stance

Recent comment by Gen. Haig, White House chief of staff, on Watergate suggests that our peo-ple might as well accept the facts as stated by President Nixon and drop the whole matter.

However, the average American citizen believes that participation by any President in the unlawful activities of a Watergate is, and always should be, unpardon-

Therefore, the issue before the House Judiciary Committee is whether the President expressed or implied approval of any such.

C. D. WINANT,

NEW YORK—Is there no limit McLaughlin. And, I might add, to the weapons Richard Nixon should do so, even as we dishonor those tame priests who have been trotted out in history by emperors and princes to baptize their grimy

Arousing Anger

Mr. Nixon will succeed in arousing the anger of many who care deeply that we should not trifle with men of God, and who will recall that Mr. Nixon has at least a passive weakness for that kind of thing. For many years, Billy Graham was always there to suggest, however faintly, that God is a middle-class Republican. And when Mr. Nixon went to a church service in Key Biscayne to give thanks for the cease-fire South Vietnam, he suffered himself to be described by the local pastor in terms that would have embarrassed St. John of the Cross.

The presidential presence is said to be altogether over-awing. But Father McLaughlin is not a country preacher. To become a Jesuit requires 13 years of hard study in the seminary. (Father McLaughlin should have taken the 14th year.) And after that, he served as an editor of the Jesuit weekly, America, which for a while was given to loosing thunderbolts at any Catholic who expressed any reservation over any papal inflection given in any encyclical. During the 1900s, many Jesuits, for from tolling in the vineyards of ultramontanism, became selfconsciously, not to say obstreperously, independent, the hero of the group in question being of course their fellow Jesuit, Father Daniel Berrigan, Father Mc-Laughlin then ran for senator from Rhode Island against John Pastore, which suggests his inclination to lost causes: and now one detects the accents of yore, the only difference being that Richard Nixon is taking the place of the Pope; in which respect, there is, once again, the old credibility gap. Pather McLaughlin appealed to the virtue of charity, and of course he is correct—we should be guided by charity. But charity does not require the Congress of the United States and the American people to maintain Richard Nixon as President of the United States. In my judgment charity might properly have been invoked against disbarring Spiro Agnew once he was removed from the vice-presidency; but charity has nothing to do with keeping us from giving to the transcripts the kind of attention that Mr. Nixon ssked us to give to them-from dwelling on the contradictions, remarking the selfishness of their concern, expressing a not uncosmopolitan dismay at the quality of the discourse. The only thing that charity absolutely requires is that no further analysis be made of the remarks of Father McLaughlin political analyst, saying to himself, as he drops bomb, after bomb, after bomb? Did he believe that a paid consultant wearing a Roman collar could transubstantiate the tapes from barracksroom discussions into sacrosanct deliberations of a man identified by Father McLaughlin as "the greatest moral leader of the last third of this century"? What is finally surprising about it is that Mr. Nixon isn't really that bad. The transcripts are not really that bad. What is bad is that the transcripts should have been released at all, and what is bad is that Mr. Nixon actually believed they would lighten his burden. And, now, that Mr. Nixon either believes what Father Mc-Laughlin says, in which case he has completely lost touch with reality; or else he doesn't believe it, but he thinks it will work :which case he has completely lost touch with reality. And if he has indeed lost touch, what is the most charitable thing the American people could hope for?

At TWA, we feel that experienced business travellers are the ultimate judges of airline service.

They travel a lot. And if you don't please them, you lose them.

We're glad to say that a lot of them are pretty pleased about TWA.

As businessmen, they understand the simple logic behind TWA's Ambassador Service: give people better value for their money than anybody else, and you end up with many more satisfied passengers.

They may come out with words of praise. Or they may quietly book with TWA again for the next trip.

Either way, it's a good reason for you to see your travel agent about flying TWA next time.

BALLET IN HAMBURG U.S. Choreographer's Rich View of Dance

By David Stevens

HAMBURG (IHT).-John Neumeier, the American choreographer in his first season as the Hamburg State Opera's ballet director, has just given notice of an ambitious and richly elaborated vision of dance as a theatrical spectacle—one that seems likely to give dance a strong claim to a bigger share of the audience in what already is a great theatrical and musical city.

"Meyerbeer/Schumann," Neumeier's first original, full-evening ballet since transferring himself, his dancers and a nucleus of repertory from Frankfurt, defies easy classification. It is a phan-tasmagoria of musical-historicalliterary associations on the worlds of two composers of the romantic age—Giacomo Meyerbeer, who had dreadful creative hangups but whose now-moribund operas were the rage of his time, and Robert Schumann, whose music lives but whose tangled personal life ended in mental derange-

The spectacle begins with Caruso's recording of "O Paradise" from Meyerbeer's "L'Africana" and ends with the Adaglo from Schumann's Second Symphony, and in between employs scores by two contemporary composers. It uses the recorded voices of two actors uttering the words of the two main characters. It requires the services of a conductor who doubles as a pianist and a composer who doubles as a conductor, and what must be the entire troupe of dancers, one of whom has to produce a few notes on the piano that occupies the center rear of the stage for the work's two hours. The dance ranges from abstract to representational and its vocabulary over a wide classical-modern spectrum.

Compensations

If all this sounds like an indigestible mixture of disparate elements, well, there were times when the connecting thread ran thin and the symbolic-literary baggage heavy. But the compen-sations were in the right place, with an ample amount of expressive and inventive choreography when it counted

While Caruso sang and the actors spoke (Schumann's criticism of "Les Huguenots" and Meyer-beer's pained reaction), Max Midmet (Meyerbeer) and Fran-cois Kisus (Schumann) did barre exercises, then wandered around the stage dressing themselves-Meyerbeer with an in-stinct for flamboyance and avidly collecting laurel wreaths as he went; Schumann with irritated indecisiveness. Then the stage was filled with Meyerbeer and his gallery of operatic characters, the composer battling with his creative blocks as his figures acted out their witless plots with extravagant gestures until their whole world collapsed of its own hollowness. The effective score for this section was Günter Bialas's "Meyerbeer Paraphrases," which succeeded somehow in being both respectful of Meyerbeer's most familiar melodies, while using changed instrumen-tation and interrupted climaxes for alienation effect. Christoph Eschenbach conducted this part fluently, then for the interlude that began the second part of the spectacle he moved to the piano on stage for a sensi-tively nuanced performance of Schumann's "Kinderszenen," for which Neumeier devised an ab-stract ballet, classical yet full of childlike hesitations, exuberance and unpredictability.

Then Wilhelm Killmayer took over on the podium to conduct his own new score-characterized mainly by long overlapping phrases in the strings and outbursts of percussion—while the dancers, moving in sinuously suggestive, intertwined groupings, gave choreographic form to Schumann's life through the figures of the composer, Clara, Clara's forbidding father, Brahms, Schu-mann's mother and the Florestan and Eusebius of his own split personality.

. An Epilogue

Neumeier returned to abstraction for an epilogue, but this time with the dance being shaped by the long span of the symphonic Adagio, whereas the "Kindersze-nen" dances were for small groups changing in number and character with each "scene."

The whole had continuity and variety, but the construction was sufficiently loose to suggest that "Meyerbeer" and "Schumann" could easily be performed separately—in fact, in next season's Staatsoper prospectus, they are listed separately—and even that

HAMBURG OPERA IN ITALY

'The Magic Flute'—Major Event for Florentine Festival

By William Weaver

FLORENCE, May 15 (IHT).—The second major musical event of Maggio Musicale, Florence's spring festival, opened last night: This was a superbly realized, beautifully paced performance of Mozart's "Magic Flute." brought here by the Hamburg State Opera. Unfortunately, the visit of the Hamburg company will be brief; after three performances of the Mozart work, they are leaving. Once they were brought this far, it would have been interesting to see some of the other productions in their large and often unconventional

But instead of complaining about what wasn't given, one should praise what was. The company came complete, with chorus and orchestra; and from the first bars of the overture it was clear that it would be a coherent, stylish, pondered (but far from ponderous) reading of the score. The conductor, Horst Stein, kept everything virtually at chamber-level, making the prankish scenes light-hearted and the solemn pages taut, intense. Everything flowed easily, as if spontaneously; and there was—as there rarely is in Italian opera houses—a true sense of a team, a troupe, playing for one another as much as for the sudlence.

The coherence of the cast makes the singling out of individual members invidious, and yet it is impossible not to underline the stately, noble Sarastro of Hans Sotin: the tender Pamina of Lucia Popp; the sweet, truly sung Tamino of Werner Hollweg. In the part of Papageno, so often over-hammed, Ude Krekow—in a Harpo Mark get-up—was youthful and engaging, abetted by his pretty Papagena. Jutta-Renate Ihloff. The three boys were touching, never cute.

When it was new, some time ago, this Peter Ustinov staging of "The Magic Flute" came in for some criticism. It is hard now to see why; it is surely respectful of the text and faithful to the music, and yet inventive. Some details of the sets by Jean-Denis Maldles might be improved perhaps (the fire and water tests were too tame), but his costumes are handsome, a positive contribution to a thoroughly enjoyable experience.

Met's Hoving Sees No Cultural Slump in United States

By Robert J. Donovan

NEW YORK-It is not hard to find signs that culture in the United States, in these days of inflation, corruption and mass production, has fallen on evil

"The Exorcist" is making millions while the Metropolitan Opera has been forced to shorten the 1974-75 season by at least six weeks because of costs. Neither a novel nor a play was found worthy of a Pulitze: prize this year.

Has culture become a victim of high prices, vulgarity, pornog-raphy, violence, over-population and crumbling tradition?

No-in the opinion of Thomas Hoving, the controversial director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. "The strengths in the arts are not so much declining as shifting," Mr. Hoving said.

Highest Quality

"Not too many years ago 36 Broadway theaters were flourishing. With the works of such playwrights as Tennessee Williams, Arthur Miller and others. you had a never-ending procession of things that were the highest quality—even experimen-

"Now that is not so true," Mr. Hoving went on Theater people get out their pocket calculators and say let Papp do it, let somebody else do it. To solve the problem of inflation they renovated theaters, put in vastly more seats. This caused public discomfort, and they were in a vicious circle, with the whole environment becoming a money thing.

"That generated Off-Broadway and off-Off-Broadway where one would think the slack would be picked up, but it hasn't, curiously enough. I guess the big stage is still very important.

"The Kennedy Center [in Washington, D.C.] is the one place in the country that is really doing a quite spectacular job. The critics condemned its architecture, said a town like Washington wouldn't go for it. But it is the only one with full bookings, making its own way financially." the museum director pointed out.
"It is putting on the openings of the top plays in the country right

Transformed Theater

"It has transformed not only Washington but quality theater. It was the first to put on Moon for the Misbegotten, Bernstein's s' and 'Jumpers,' a really exciting play."

I had seen a great performance of "Good News" at the Kennedy Center and said that I hoped t would get to New York. "There you have it — right there!" Mr. Hoving exclaimed.

This strengthens it at the moment but then it tends to become a little bit shaky, so I don't think film is in the great position of strength that people

Mark of Decline "My feeling is that this jugger-naut of sex is a mark of decline," Mr. Hoving continued. "They try to explain that this is a great freedom, a getting away from taboos, but I am not convinced by that because in the vast per-centages of cases it takes this raw commercial tinge.

"A lot of people shrick about TV, but I have a feeling that TV is greater than the great Hollywood epoch. We remember the

There was little improvement to be seen in the critical trade and current account balances, however.

Although Japanese exports, including a sharp increase in ship deliveries, jumped 49 percent from a year earlier to $4.16 billion in April, imports, mainly reflecting higher oil prices, surged 93 per-cent to $4.54 billion.

This left a trade deficit for April of $380 million, a slight deterioration from March's $376million deficit and a big turnaround from a $480-million surplus in April 1973. The situation looks a little better en a seasonally-adjusted basis. By this method of calcula-tion, April exports total $4.16 billion, up 12.8 percent from March, while imports are up only 1.5 percent to $4.43 billion. Thus, the seasonally-adjusted trade deficit dipped to $270 million in April

Cost of Living In W. Germany Up 7% in Year

WIESBADEN, West Germany, May 15 (AP-DJ).—West Germany's cost-of-living index was 125.9 (1970 equals 100) at the middle of April, up 0.6 percent from 125.2 at the middle of March and up 7.1 percent from a year earlier, the Pederal Statistics Office reported today. In February and March, the index was up 7.6 percent and 7.2 percent respectively from the like 1973 months.

In another report, the Bundesbank said demand for German industrial goods in March was down 2 percent on a seasonally-adjusted basis from the average for the first two months of 1974, but was up 9 percent from a year ago. The preliminary order inflow index in March was at 141 (1970 equals 100), down

Unilever said various factors make the outlook for the rest of the year uncertain. World market prices for some of the raw materials used by the group's food companies appear to have fallen slightly from the peak levels of the first quarter, the company said. But it noted that there are still high priced inventories to be consumed, while prices of chemical feedstocks and raw materials for detergents are still

The company said all product groups except animal feeds and meat showed good increases in sales volume in the first quarter. In Europe as a whole results improved, while its North American companies made "an en-couraging start to the year."

U.K. Companies to Include Inflation in Their Accounts

LONDON, May 15 (AP-DJ) .--A new, provisional, standard of accounting aimed at showing how inflation has affected corporate earnings was publishcd today by the Accounting Standards Steering Committee

The new standard applies to all companies in Britain with a stock exchange listing and is recommended to all other companies. It applies to accounting periods beginning on, or after. June 80 and is expected to sharply reduce the size of profits

The initiative is "the most important advance in accounting in our generation." said Kenneth Wright, president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales. "It transcends in importance the consolidated accounts which were first publicly discussed" in 1922,

The provisional statement is based on a draft which was issued for comment by the ASSO in January 1973. It is to be converted into a full standard after the publication of a report by a committee, known as the Sandlands Committee. which has been formed by the government to inquire into inflation accounting. If necessary, the provisional standard will be modified in light of the committee's report Under the provisional standard, companies are being asked to give shareholders, in addition to their basic historical accounts. a supplementary statement in terms of the value of the pound at the end of the period to which the accounts relate. This will illustrate the impact of inflation on the company's results.

The provisional standard has been approved by the councils of the participating bodies of ASSC
—the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales in association with the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Scotland, the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland, the Association of Certified Accountants and the Institute of Cost and Management Accountants. Some major U.K. companies have already published inflationadjusted accounts as supplements in their annual reports, employing the recommendations contained in the ASSC's draft. Among the principal new material in the provisional standard as compared with the previously disclosed draft is the recommendation that inflation accounting be adopted in due course for interim accounts. 10-year summsries of corporate results and prof-

Surplus in Payments Narrows in Quarter

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP), -U.S. industrial output rose in April for the first time in five months, largely because of a recovery in auto production, the government reported today.

The increase of four-tenths of percent showed that the nation's business recovery may be on target with government forecasts. Industrial output declined three-tenths of 1 percent in March and six-tenths of 1 percent in February.

The administration has predicted that the steep first-quarter slide in the country's economy would flatten out in the second quarter and be followed by a resumption of economic growth after mid-year. Despite the April increase in Board's industrial production index stood at 124.7, which was still far below the high of 127.5 reached last November before the impact of the Arab oil embargo

Payments Surplus

The government also reported an $865-million surplus in the balance of payments for the first quarter of the year, a big decline from the surplus of $2.7 billion in the last quarter of 1973.

A major factor in the worsen ing payments position was the higher cost of foreign cil. The cost of oil imports rose 72 percent to $4.6 billion, while the quantity declined by 19 percent. But the report on industrial production indicated the worst of the economic slowdown resulting from the oil shortage may be tion report sald. Production of business equipment continued to increase and there also were advances in output of iron and steel mill products, the government report said. The payments balance figures were on the "official reverve" basis, which measures the dollars accumulated by foreign central banks through their foreign exchange market dealings. The United States has a payments surplus on this basis when central banks abroad show a net increase in their total dollar holdings. Another measure of the balance the first quarter, but this measure showed improvement from the prior quarter and from liquidity" balance showed a firstquarter shortfall of $544 million following a $1.13-billion deficit in the previous period. A year earlier, this measure of private as well as government dollar flows registered a big $6.55-billion deficit.

Special Factors

The Commerce Department said the first-quarter balances on both bases were influenced by several special developments, including changes in trade and financial transactions related to the Arab oil embargo, the removal of U.S. controls an capital outflows late in January, and changes in restrictions on capital inflows by several foreign coun-

The official reserves transactions balance was adversely affected by a $2.4-billion shift in inflows of liquid private capital as liquid assets held abroad by U.S. banks, agencies and branches of foreign banks in the United States rose sharply.

The merchandise trade surplus in the first quarter narrowed substantially to $290 million from $1.36 billion in the fourth quarter, reflecting the hefty rise in prices of imported oil in recent months. The trade figures, which are adjusted on a balance of pay-ments basis, showed exports of $22.38 billion in the first quarter and imports of $22.09 billion. The Commerce Department also said business inventories in March rose a seasons lly-adjusted

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES:

Loeus Seeks Control of CNA

Loews Corp. has signaled its intent to take over CNA Financial Corp., a troubled Chicken insurance holding company, by applying to the Illinois Department of Insurance for approxim to purchase a majority of CNA's voting accomties. The move would involve an investment of well over $250 million. Illinois law required that anyone seeking 10 percent or more of the stock of an Illinois-based insurance company in its obtain department approval. Public hearings of Loews' application are to be held June 6. Currently pending before the department is in op-plication of Swiss-pased Winterthur Insurance. which is sesking up to 20 percent of CNA's stock. A decision on that application is emported later this month. Loews, which currently owns about 6.8 percent of CMA's stock, is sorking to buy 20 million CNA common and or preferred shares through a cash tender offer to holders, which, together with its current posttion, would give it effective control.

Oil Crisis Seen Altering Banking Theory

By Hobart Rowen WASHINGTON, May 15 (WP). -The real burden on the oilconsuming world caused by massive boosts in oil prices will be gradual rather than immediate because of the inability of the oil-exporting countries to quickly increase their imports. Thus, according to Robert Solumon, deputy chairman of the International Monetary Fund's Committee of Twenty deputies and senior adviser to the Federal Reserve Board, "the real impact on the standard of living of the rest of the world will be mitigat-

Mr. Solomon, who will resume full-time duties at the Fed after mid-year, said in a speech delivered in New York that the oilexporting countries, even those with more diversified economies, will develop large surpluses be-cause it will take time to "increase their imports in line with their increased export earnings."

Thus, the consuming nations for their higher-priced oil with debt, rather than transferring Sabena introduces a more comfortable way to get around Europe: the Boeing 737-200.

The Boeing 737-200 comes into service with Sabena on routes within Europe. With the same wide-bodied layout which is soon to be familiar on all Sabena aircraft, the 737 offers real advantages in passenger comfort. Although you'll take the 737 for relatively short flights, you'll soon discover that you have more shoulder, elbow and legs space than ever. Wherever you sit in the cabin, you'll find you're never more than one seat from an aisle.

And your hand baggage disappears into a handy, individual locker over your head. With its powerful new fan jets, built by Pratt & Whitney, the 737 takes off more quickly, reaches its cruising altitude sooner, and sets you down with a much shorter landing run.

Inside and out, you'll find our 737's decorated in the new Sabena pattern.

And you'll find our hostesses wearing new couturier-designed uniforms. In short, the 737 will get you to where you're going more quickly, more comfortably, more stylishly. You'll be able to take the 737 for all flights within Europe. And if you want to fly on with us, we can take you to any of 4 continents. You'll soon find Sabena is a better way to fly. Go Belgian. Go Sabena.

Because Chemical bankers are also imaginative businessmen, they think beyond routine banking.

Different financial problems can't all be tackled in the same way. And they can't usually be solved by banking techniques alone. At Chemical Bank, our people have the same kind of imagination as successful businessmen. That's why so often our customers reshape projects they started with: our financial specialists open up entirely new horizons and find original, workable solutions. The sort that can't always be found in the pages of a banking manual.

Rapid decision-making.

Chemical Bank's solutions can be implemented right away because we realize that every moment lost can jeopardize the success of an enterprise. And our people not only have the same kind of imagination as successful businessmen, but the same freedom to make decisions, too. And that's vital to customers who want to make decisions and make them fast.

Effective world-wide execution.

Singapore, New York, or Rio de Janeiro, Chemical Bank can help you financially anywhere around the world through offices located in the strategic places. Our people constantly exchange information and experience with their colleagues all over the globe. They keep in touch with every little fluctuation in the market, so that they can help their customers as effectively as possible in whatever part of the world they re doing business.

Our world-wide offices.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY CALIFORNIA ASIATIC OIL COMPANY

(A SUBSIDIARY OF STANDARD OIL CO. OF CALIFORNIA)

The Government of the Libvan Arab Republic on February 11. 1974, announced the issuance of a decree whereby it purported to nationalize immediately all of the interests and assets in Libya of California Asiatic Oil Company ("Calasiatic") in relation to Concessions 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 51, 73, 83, 119, 120, 131, 132 and 133 in Libya. The Government of the Libyan Arab Republic had previously purported to nationalize 51% of Calasiatic's interests and assets in all of these concessions on September 1, 1973, an action publicly stated by the Government to be in retaliation for Calasiatic's refusal to accede to the Government's demands for transfer to it of interests in all of its concessions for an amount far less than their true value. The action by the Government on February 11 coincided with the opening of the Washington Conference of principal oil consuming nations and was characterized in a Libyan Government press release as a "practical and decisive reply to President Nixon's message to Col. Moammar Gaddafi."

The Government of the Libyan Arab Republic has purported to transfer all of Calasiatic's interests and assets in Libya to the Libyan National Oil Corporation.

Calasiatic's rights to these concessions were acquired from the Libyan Government by Calasiatic and Texaco Overseas Petroleum Company jointly through Deeds of Concession granting these companies the exclusive right to explore for and to produce oil from the areas of Libya covered by these concessions and to export the oil. Crude oil is presently produced from two concessions:

Concession 47 crude oil is called "Sirtica Crude" and that produced from Concession 51 is called "Amna Crude."

These actions of the Government of the Libyan Arab Republic were discriminatory and arbitrary. As such, they are a clear violation of International Law as well as of contractual obligations of the Libyan Government which are provided by Libyan law. Calasiatic has protested the announced decrees and, in accordance with the concessions, has called for arbitration of the dispute arising from the Libyan Government's actions.

Calasiatic has also notified the Government of the Libyan Arab Republic that the Government's acts are wrongful and incapable of depriving the company of its rights.

Accordingly, the attention of all those who may be concerned with these developments, whether as purchasers of oil or otherwise, is drawn to the continuance of Calasiatic's rights with respect to crude oil produced from the above-mentioned concessions and products manufactured or derived therefrom. It is the intention of the company to assert those rights whenever and wherever necessary against those who infringe them.

ROLLING STONE magazine has become an American institu-tion, which might seem a little sad for a magazine born just seven years ago as the voice of the counter-culture. Yes, it is still published from San Fran-cisco, and yes, it is still devoted to rock 'n' roll, sort of,

But now, it has a circulation of some 400,000 and an average thickness of 96 pages. A stable of literary heavy-weights (some nurtured from its own pages) con-tribute regularly, from Tom Wolfe to William Burroughs to Truman Capote to Hunter Thompson, Subject matter has long since reached beyond rock to include articles of general interest to rock audiences (mystical sects, dope) and even things they might be interested in (electoral poli-

What Rolling Stone really is is Jann Wenner's personal, private forum. Wenner founded the magazine, and since its inception he has endured-or provoked-a steady turnover of editors and writers. Part of this has to do with his own changing notions of what the magazine should be about-more or less music, more or less radical politics, more or less personality pieces about performers—but mostly it has to do with his own Citizen Kane selfimage. Wenner is a hip autocrat, and is cordially hated in some quarters, as all autocrats must

The basis of the magazine's success is still its coverage of rock, simply because rock is the music to which most literate assthetically inclined nonmusicians listen. Rock in its raunchier forms may be the music of teenagers, and certainly latter-day Woodstocks like Watkins Glen are most important as occasions for youth to celebrate its sense of communality. But kids grow up, and from the start Rolling Stone has appealed to the FM-radio audience of rock: People who may listen to rock instead of so-called "serious" music, but who listen to

As far as large numbers of pro-fessional people in their twenties and thirties are concerned, rock is today's music and music-despite the complaints of classical new-music boosters as they sur-vey their empty halls—retains as strong a hold on people's imaginations as it ever did. Rolling Stone offers the sophisticated pop-music audience coverage that is both lively and informative at a level that matches the andi-ence's own sophistication. Like most innovators, Wenner dian a so much create his audience as perceive it, intuitively, for what it was, and then cater to it.

For the last several years the magazine has shown a quite remarkable propensity for self-can-nibalization. Rolling Stone has its own publishing house, Straight Arrow Books, but that is devoted mostly to worthy, often marginally commercial ventures. But there has also been a whole blitz of anthologies plucked from the magnzine's pages, of which these three are only the latest. As the three different publishers indicate, what Rolling Stone does is farm out the rights to this material to mass-distribution publishers who then bring the countercultural message to the people.

There is nothing wrong with this, as long as one realizes what one is buying. A title like "The Rolling Stone Reader," for instance, might lead one to expect that this was a carefully chosen selection of a representative grouping of the best pieces of all different sorts that have appeared in the magazine over the last seven years. What it is, instead, is a seemingly random collection of highly variable hunks of prose from 1970 through 1973. The trouble with it is that the editors have apparently been unwilling or unable to duplicate pieces that have already appeared in other authologies, particularly those devoted to single authors. The result is that some of the best pieces the magazine ever ran have come out as expanded books or as part of collections by individual Rolling Stone writers, and do not reappear here.

The same complaint might well be made about "The Rolling Stone Rock 'n' Roll Reader." while some added grumbles. None of the material in it was written a ter 1970 and nowhere on the cover back or inside-front page is tilimitation indicated. And there is no index which is really inco-cusable. This book was actual. put together in 1970, and then delayed for a variety of reasons Once again, it lacks some of the things that made Rolling Stone the bible of rock.

The third of these books, "Tite Rolling Stone Record Review, Vol. II," is the most honest of the lot. Here one has a properly indexed assortment of record reviews from 1970 through 1972, complementing the first volume and provid-ing in handy reference form what the magazine had to say about all the important pop albums that came out over that period.

Any of the various grab bags has its merits, of course. It's just that some day one would like the editors of the magazine to sit down and pick out their best—to give us an anthology based on the honesty and concern for ex-cellence on which Rolling Stone's reputation rests, rather than on the simpler, more all-American pursuit of profit.

While referee Don Wicks was handing out 20 penalties for a total of 60 minutes in the opening period, Phil Esposito began paying back some of his critics. He scored his ninth goal of the playoffs; converting Johnny Bucyk's shot on a power play. Though the second period was scoreless as were the first 14 1/2 minutes of the third, that was the time most discussed later by the players and coaches.

Philadelphia's Bill Rarber sent a high-riser past Gilbert for what proved the game-winner with 5-1/2 minutes to go. The insurance tally was made by André Dupong about two minutes later.

But what the scoreboard did not show was Bobby Schmeutz's shooting the puck at an empty Flyers' net and missing at the start of period No. 2, and another "sure goal" that Bruin Wayne Cashman missed with a wide shot in the middle of that period.

Schmautz had a second great chance in the final period when the Bruin right wing broke in alone on Parent. But Bernic, with fine judgment, collapsed at Schmantz's feet, taking away the

Court Ruling Setback for NFL In Battle With New League

NEW YORK, May 15 (NYT) --A court ruling in Cincinnati went in favor of the World Football League yesterday and against the Bongala, the local National Football League team that sought an injunction barring WFL clubs from signing any more of its players Two have jumped to the WFL Bill Bergey and Steve Chonyszak

Meanwhile, Gary Davidson, the WFL commissioner, continued his cotimistic prognosis about the new league in a news conference here, and the New York Stars announced that eight of their 10 awar games would be televised. All 10 home games, at Downing Stadium, Randalls Island, will be

"What's a White House press briefing?" Alice asked.

"That is where they deny what they have alwhich is the only reason it could be the March ready told you.

"It sounds like fun," Alice said. The March Hare brought into the Buchwald press room. A chess pawn was standing at a podium.

"Who is that?" Alice asked. "That is the press secretary. He talks in riddles. Listen," "Why are transcripts better than tapes?" the press secretary asked.

"I don't know the answer to that one." Alice said to the March Hare. "Why are transcripts better than tapes?" she shouted, to everyone's surprise. € 5 $

The press secretary looked at her with cold blue eyes. "I re-fuse to comment on that." Alice looked confused. "Why did he ask us a riddle if he can't give an answer to it?" The March Hare said, "They

Russia May Rule Dissident Insane

MOSCOW, May 15 (UPI).-Igor Ogurtsov, a dissident serving a 15-year sentence for anti-Soviet activity, has been placed under psychiatric observation and told he will probably be declared insane, dissident sources said today.

Mr. Ogurtsov, 37, a Leningrad translator, was sentenced in 1967. He spent seven years in what reportedly is a severe institution, Vladimir Prison, where he earned a reputation as a strong, resilient and defiant prisoner, the sources said. This spring he πas transferred to Perm and placed in solitary confinement, they said.

"What a stupid thing." Alice said. "Why is everyone writing in their notebooks?"

"They write down everything he save even though they don't believe him."

"Why don't they believe him?" Alice asked.

"Because he makes things up. He has to or there would be no reason to have a briefing."

The press secretary spoke "All the evidence is in azain. and it proves behind a reasonable doubt that the king is innocent of all crimes, ergo, ergo, ergo. et cetera." "But what about the evidence the king refuses to turn over to committee?" "That is not evidence." the press secretary replied. "If there was further evidence to prove king guilty, he would have gladly given it to the committee. The fact that he hasn't turned it over means regretfully there is none. It's as simple as that." "It doesn't sound very simple to me," Alice said. "Why can't we hear all the pes?" the Mock Turtle asked, tapes?" "so we can decide for ourselves who is innocent and who is guilty.'

The press secretary replied "If you heard the tapes it would only prove the innocent are guilty and the guilty are innocent and it would serve no purpose but to confuse you. Besides, what you would hear is not what you have read and what you have read is not what you would hear, so it's better not to hear what cannot be read. Isn't that perfectly clear?"

"I feel I'm back at the Mad Natter's tea party," Alice said. "Now I will give you some important news today." the press secretary said. "This is on the record. Twas brilling and the slithy toves did gyre and gimble in the wabe: All mimsy were the borogoves, and the mome raths out grabe'.

Everyone wrote it down. "What did he say?" Alice asked. "Nothing," the March Hare re-plied. "He's just stalling until he can go to lunch."

Enriching Life, Learning With Make-Believe

By Richard Flaste

NEW HAVEN (NYT).—Jerome L. Singer Nikes to sit at the picture window in his study, sipping sherry and staring out at the Connecticut woods that surround his house. It's a daydreamer's kind of view. And Mr. Singer is a daydreamer, always has

The other day the Yale psychologist was sitting by the window talking about daydreaming more than doing it, and the emptied sherry glass had an unusually active role to play.

"Browner," Mr. Singer said, as he waved the glass through the air. "Brownzzzzzzz." He was making believe that the glass was an airplane, just as a child might. Then he brought up his free hand and began to attack the glass. "Brownsener.

"I used to do this kind of thing when I was pretty young." Mr. Singer said, not detectably embarrassed that he also does it sometimes when he's 50. It was a demonstration of a critical early element in the development of make-believe: The pretender knows that what he's doing is just pretend that the glass is an airplane, sure, but still only a glass.

The ability to make that distinction appears in children as early as the second year as part of "symbolic play," the term used by the Swiss psychologist, Jean Plaget, to differentiate make-believe from games of mastery and games of rules.

Crossing Threshold

When a child can make that transformation—from glass to glass-airplane—he has crossed the threshold into the world of make-believe. He's got the capability to begin, as Mr. Singer puts it, "practicing the production of images." And he has started on a road that will carry him from imaginative play to daydreams and to other vivid modes of thinking.

Mr. Singer, who has spent much of his adult life researching the world of makebelieve, said he thinks that fantasy is a learning and emotional resource that ought to be prized and cultivated, although it has been widely maligned.

He sees make-believe play opposed by widespread prejudice. For example, the 11-year-old who still plays pretend games may be judged by adults as "childish." And the adolescent who is a daydreamer may be thought of as "regressive." Mr. Singer sees himself not only as one who has done a great deal of research on his own but as a teacher who has spurred others to work in the field. His recently published book, "The Child's World of Make-Believe" (Academic Press, $11.75), incorporates some of his own investigations and those of colleagues he super-

Through his work and that of a handful of other research-oriented psychologists (including his wife, Dorothy), Mr. Singer said he believes that "images are just now coming back into their own." In the last 10 years, investigators have been examining, for instance, the relationship of imagery to a child's learning.

Mr. Singer is convinced that there are two kinds of mental recording systems, one verbal, the other using images. The verbal is efficient and fast, but the image system is better for storing and comprehending the details of complex concepts. The im-plication is that the child who is better equipped to handle images is also better equipped to learn.

Moreover, the imaginatively active child could carry that early make-believe into the ability to be a creative adult. It may be creativity in the broad sense—the innovative person who imagines his way to unconventional solutions. Or in the narrower sense—the Goethes of the world who turn childhood inner richness into fantasies to be transformed into the written word.

Even if the child doesn't become another Goethe, the ability to make believe may help him become the kind of person who can appreciate art because he recognizes it as part of his own inner ex-

And he may learn patience. In a widely cited piece of research. Dr. Singer once told children in an experimental group that they were trying out to be astronauts and one of the prerequisites for the job was an ability to wait quietly. He found that the children who were the best at fantasying were also the best at waiting. They would stand there, muttering things under their breath, pretending they were

It may seem, however, that the "good little boys and girls" are also passive and withdrawn dreamin', as the Everly Brothers put it some years ago, their lives away. But Mr. Singer maintains that that impression, under most circumstances, would be wrong.

Fantasy, he said. "is an additional resource they have. They can still be curious, they can still be social."

He concedes, however, that sometimes fantasy gets out of hand. Sometimes 2 child confuses it with reality and behaves inappropriately, or his fantasy life takes on an obsessive quality.

If the child can't seem to cope with day-to-day events-he's flunking out of school, continually fighting with family members, isolated or always depressedand he seems to be deeply involved in make-believe, then, Mr. Singer says, the fantasies may be something to worry about. But he hastens to assert that in his view the dangerous aspects of fantasy have been "greaty exaggerated."

He puts his emphasis on the healthful aspects of make-believe-how it trains children to be learners and planners (because they become adults who can envision the future) and empathizers (because they can imagine themselves in someone else's place). Mr. Singer said he thinks that a significant contribution he and his colleagues have made is experimental evi-dence indicating that imaginativeness can be taught. That evidence means it makes sense for a parent to try to teach his young child to develop images. An obvious and traditional way to encourage imagery is through picture books and storytelling.

Parents' Role

Parents should also play pretend games with their children. And children need time on their own when they don't have to be interacting with friends, siblings or parents, when they can dream or play in

In homes that provide precious little in the way of imaginative examples, Mr. Singer said he thinks television may prove invaluable as a source of fantasy material. But even in homes full of fantasy, TV still can be a helpful electronic storyteller.

In Mr. Singer's own childhood, of course, there was no TV, but there were plenty of books. He recalls that by age 6 he had already read "Tarsan of the Apes," and he relished imagining that he was a small version of the bowling hero.

His friends even called him Tarzan, because he couldn't resist continually telling them the jungle tales. In those days he was young and cared, naturally enough, only about his own Tarzan. He grew up to care about everybody's.
